Dear Sereti Valia,

Thank you for your kind response, and we think that your proposed school partnership sounds great. Your answer to my worries makes good sense. We believe we can conquer them together. We would like to build a good relationship with your school and we believe it will benefit both sides.

Our principal Mr. Bo who is in charge of the whole school(K-12), he also thinks it is good to found the partnership between our two schools.

we can reach these objectives:

-a chance to work with colleagues from schools similar to their own, on projects that give students the knowledge, understanding, skills and values that are considered important in both cultures

-developing equitable and sustainable links between schools, that involve more educators and young people as the partnership progresses, as well as people from both schools' wider community.

-creation of teaching material exchange platforms and forums fostering dialogue and promoting cooperation.

-teacher shadowing, allowing a real-time classroom experience and a deeper understanding of what being a teacher in each country involves.

-students' fuller understanding of the other participant school culture, encouraging them to explore, develop and express their own values and opinions, whilst listening to and respecting other people's points of view, which are essential characteristics in order to achieve a balanced and solid intercultural society.

We sincerely thank you for your trust and look forward to exchanging ideas with you.

Sincerely yours,

Karen Shen
